FOREWORD

The CHICAGO SCHOOLS JOURNAL began the publication in 1949 of a series of supplements dealing with free and inexpensive teaching materials. Each of the four major areas in elementary instruction has now been covered: science, mathematics, social science, and the language arts. The present supplement is the first re-issue of a number; it is more comprehensive but no less selective than the original, dated October, 1949. It is the hope of the editors that it will be feasible to re-issue the other supplements in the series at dates approximately three years after initial publication.

Dr. Sanders and Mrs. Beuschlein are now both on the science faculty of the Chicago Teachers College. They have checked the list carefully for current availability of the materials cited. In the opinion of the authors the items listed present facts and concepts which are scientifically sound and which are suitable for use with school pupils.

The rapid exhaustion of the supply of the original series of supplements has convinced the editors that many teachers found these compilations valuable. It is hoped that new numbers will be in equal demand.

Raymond M. Cook, Editor
Dean, Chicago Teachers College
